Pneumococci are responsible for about 30% of non-primary bacteraemias in cancer patients. Once-fatal disease can become a serious postoperative complication with an incidence of 10 to 30%. The authors describe a case of a 49-year old man who underwent a surgical procedure for a bronchial adenocarcinoma and who developed a postoperative wound infection by Streptococcus pneumoniae. The diagnosis of pneumococcal wound infection was evoked on the basis of S. pneumoniae isolated from blood culture. Surgical and pharmacological treatment was decided upon by

Then, when that data is returned from the server, the component updates itself. When I navigate back to that component by manually going to the URL (it will update correctly as it shouldn't see any issue at all. The issue comes in when I'm in the same component within Angular Material (where I have a button that will trigger the component to update, it will not, it waits for the actual data to come back from the server before it tries and does the job. However, if I go back to the component and refresh the page, it will work as expected. Can someone tell me why this is happening, it's not making sense to me. export class MapLandingComponent implements OnInit { merchant: Array; display_order: Array; constructor(private merchantService: MerchantService) { } ngOnInit() { this.merchantService.getMerchants().subscribe(merchants => { this.merchant = merchants; this.display_order = [...this.merchant]; }); } onClick() { this.merchantService.getDisplayOrders(this.display_order).subscribe(orders => { this.display_order = orders.display_order; }); } } As you can see, I'm returning this.display_order from the getDisplayOrders() method to be used within the component, so 3da54e8ca3
