My Android OS is rooted, so I have root access. How can I replace the default android sound with a different one (e.g. the one from Rainmeter)? A: If you are looking for a different sound to play when the phone rings, you may find it in /system/media/audio/ui/. There are a couple different audio files there, but there's probably one that you want. The adaptive FFT filter bank coder: theory and implementation. The purpose of the adaptive filter bank (AFB) is to decompose an audio signal into a set of frequency channels. It is used, for example, in speech coding to decompose a wideband signal into a set of subband signals. The AFB employs a bank of bandpass filters for decomposition. This study investigates an adaptive FFT (Ad-FFT) filter bank architecture based on the Cello algorithm, which is a type of time-varying wavelet transform (TVWT). The Ad-FFT can operate in real-time, and is easily implemented. The efficiency of the Ad-FFT is compared to the efficiency of existing audio coding standards. Experimental results show that the Ad-FFT can achieve
