This innovative technology is a collaboration between DICE, an Electronic Arts company based in London and WITNESS Inc., an Electronic Arts company based in Boston. FIFA 22 introduces 'HyperMotion Technology' a ground-breaking new gameplay mechanic that harnesses the power of motion capture technology to dynamically simulate player behaviour in every aspect of gameplay. This change in player behaviour stems from "HyperMotion Technology" that is used to generate new footage of 22 real-life players performing a complete, high-intensity football match. The data collected from this match in motion capture suits is used to power gameplay. In an early demonstration of the technology the demonstration team led by FIFA creative director Sean O'Meara displayed genuine athleticism, crossing through 6 players with one pass. The demonstration team included Adam Dalgarno, John Brooks, Robin van Persie, Georginio Wijnaldum, Christian Pulisic and Ulysses Llanez. During the development of FIFA 22, the technology team combined 3D facial and physical scans and over 10,000 hours of video footage to teach the AI how to react to a player's actions in a realistic and intelligent way. FIFA 20 introduced David Gillett, a member of the Motion Capture team at EA Sports, as a technical advisor working on the AI. "HyperMotion Technology shows what is possible with all the gameplay data EA has at its disposal," said David Gillett, technical advisor for FIFA 20 and FIFA 22. "We've captured 22 authentic players in a motion capture suit and it shows how all the AI data can be put to use. "The proof-of-concept demo of 22 players performing a high intensity football game is genuinely extraordinary. Every movement has been captured and the end result is seamless athleticism. The technology is the result of 25 years of FIFA esports experience at FIFA and it will power many more years of FIFA games." The development of HyperMotion Technology was led by the DICE Sports Innovation team including, Raju Yoganathan, manager of sports technology, Peyton Zuber, senior vfx engineer and Richard Tillett, game designer. "The HyperMotion Technology technology is not just for new modes and game types, but is something we will be applying to current game modes," said Peyton Zuber, senior vfx engineer. "

What's new:

- New Team Tactics – Every player now has their own specific personality and play-style, providing more variety in the way you play. Simulate your own team tactics using new “team builds,” which give you more freedom to play how you see fit.
- FIFA Ultimate Team – Build & Manage Your Ultimate Team

with new Set-up Challenges. With Challenges you'll get a chance to level-up your Ultimate Team, and the more you play, the more you'll advance and the more rewards you'll earn. Do you have what it takes to claim your Ultimate Team status?

- New Main Scenario - Career Mode. Career Mode is back! Introducing "Career Mode," the most immersive and customizable mode yet in FIFA 22. Create your own goals, manage a dynamic team, fight for glory, and collect trophies as you become the undisputed world's best player, or share your accomplishments with friends.
- Adaptive AI - FIFA's AI has been upgraded. Players challenge each other with their own strengths and weaknesses, and through its new AI engine, it can adapt to new challenges based on your tactics.
- New FIFA Pro Ratings - A new proprietary system allows gamers to create their very own personal ratings, be it for chemistry with specific players, team build, club, or even their Ultimate Team. The ratings are designed to give players the most accurate information on whether their actions, in-game performances, and attributes are rare or unique in the game.
- New Breakthrough Play rewards - Get rewarded after performing as part of a well-executed "fuse" play. Watch how it happens in the Breakthrough Play live stream with "mickey-moused" commentary. All new.
- Dynamic light moments - Direct on-field decisions can have a huge impact on whether your team scores or not. Commissions and penalties can change the entire dynamic of play or even affect the outcome of the match.
- Redesigned The Journey - Check out the entire Journey progress, including increased detail and more accurate character animations.
- New player models - In over 35 years of making video games, the FIFA team has never let players down. Need details on an identity for your new signing? Check the 34 new player

FIFA is a sports game developed by EA Canada and originally published by Electronic Arts. It is currently available on PC, Xbox 360, PlayStation 3 and Wii U. The game came about when EA Sports chose to make a FIFA game without having a controller or using a Nintendo Gamecube controller as the main input device. Instead of a main controller, the EA design team opted to build a controller using the motion sensor technology that was soon to be released in the Nintendo Wii. The technology behind FIFA was the result of EA Sports' realization that they had the ability to more accurately create a simulation of the motions of the entire body because they could track a player's body across the entire field. The result was that the Wii motion controller allowed for almost unlimited possible inputs, enabling FIFA to eventually allow for every way a player could shoot, pass, dribble, slide tackle, etc. Because of the amazing development of the game on the Wii, and also because EA Sports was able to learn many of the mistakes that other game developers had made with motion controllers, FIFA proved to be the first major motion game to be commercially successful. About FUT The FIFA Ultimate Team (FUT) mode is a single-player and multiplayer (online only) mode in FIFA 22. It is the most extensive and advanced version of FUT to date, and is a continuation of EA's longstanding community club mode. FIFA Ultimate Team, or FUT, was first released in FIFA 09, and was the heart of the FIFA Ultimate League mode in FIFA 10. The mode has gone through multiple updates over the years, adding card packs, costumes, kits, and gamemodes. It is a football management simulator, in which users can manage one of two types of club: a franchise, or a licensed team. The overall goal of the game is to win the Scudamore Cup, where the winner will be the overall leader of the FIFA Ultimate League (FUT) standings. For more information on FUT, check out the FIFA Ultimate Team wiki. About FIFA 21 FIFA 21 (stands for FIFA Football Association International Soccer) was released in 2015. It was a massive improvement over its predecessor, FIFA 20. This year's release is used as the base for this year's (minus the new camera) game for all. One of the biggest changes is the introduction of the new scout vision, which allows for detailed player scouting and player analysis.
