In this list, we are going to talk about the best open source images editing software, including free alternatives to Photoshop. Top 10 Best Free Image Editing Software 2018 Best Free Photography Software Best Free Graphic Design Software Best Free Video Editing Software Best Free Web Design Software Best Free Web Hosting Software 1. GIMP The open source graphics editor GIMP is one of the most popular image editing software in the world, and for good reasons. If you need an advanced image editing software, or simply prefer a freeware over a proprietary one, GIMP is what you need. GIMP is based on the GTK+ widget toolkit. It is developed by a global team of independent volunteers, and its user interface is about the same as that of Photoshop. GIMP can be completely installed and run on Windows, Mac OS X, and Linux computers. GIMP is a free software with an open code license. However, its development is financially supported by a number of non-profit organizations. So you can install and use GIMP without paying any license fees. GIMP has features such as text manipulation, gradients, color adjustment, transformations, selection, layer editing, photo correction, image retouching, etc. It can be used for simple projects such as editing logos, doing simple graphics, graphics design, etc. GIMP can open most image formats such as JPEG, PNG, GIF, TIFF, BMP, EXR, HDR, etc. But GIMP can't read all RAW files. Pros Open Source Better than Photoshop Easy to use Shows a lot of options Cons Not as good as Photoshop 2. FotoMagico The open source graphics editor FotoMagico is a perfect alternative to Photoshop. If you need an advanced image editing software, FotoMagico will impress you with its incredible features. FotoMagico is based on the KDE and the Qt libraries. Its user interface is similar to that of Photoshop but its interface is in the Spanish language. FotoMagico is a powerful graphics editor, making it easier to edit RAW images and other images such as JPEG, GIF, PNG, BMP, etc. FotoMagico has a number of features such as the ability to edit RAW images, 05a79cccff

Firing investigators falls on the list March 4, 2012 The next budget fight may not be with Republicans in Congress but Pennsylvania state legislators. Gov. Tom Corbett has proposed a cut of nearly $30 million to his proposed 2013-14 budget. The cuts target state employees. Corbett's proposal includes a 3.4 percent cut in the General Fund - the pool of state money used for pay for all state programs, salaries, and benefits. To help offset the cost, Corbett's budget plan includes savings through across-the-board and targeted cuts that include: - Eliminating funding for several offices within the Department of Public Welfare including the Bureau of Community Corrections, the Bureau of Child Support Enforcement, the Bureau of Adult Operations, and the Bureau of Child Support. - Eliminating funding for several private contractors including public defenders, the Pennsylvania State University Police, and the Pennsylvania State Police. - Reducing the General State Aid (GSA) program by a modest $3 million to help offset a substantial portion of the state's unfunded 2010 pension liability. A full list of the proposed cuts can be found on the Department of Public Welfare's website. State government has come under fire in recent years for employee benefits, including a $92 billion, 12.5 percent increase in health insurance costs that was cut from a 2009 agreement with public employee unions. In 2010, the state passed a law making it illegal to wear a union t-shirt or cap to work. The unions were upset and have vowed to sue. Corbett has also threatened to go after another $6 million for retirement benefits and Medicaid cost-sharing in an upcoming budget bill. This year, the state also took a step toward eliminating unemployment insurance in 2012. The act was signed by Gov. Corbett but allowed the legislature to veto it. Senate Appropriations Committee chairman Jesse O'Donnell has said lawmakers could delay the state budget from taking effect until April 1, when unemployment checks stop. But he also said they need to make a decision on how to fund the government next year before then. In a meeting with Corbett, House and Senate leaders and Senate Appropriations Committee chairwoman Susan O'Donnell McBride, the governor called for immediate cuts to the budget. In an attempt to gain more control over the spending of state money, Corbett said he wants state government to play the role of a business making the harder

Wearable Technology Helps Foster Human-to-Human Connection Susan Diekema, president of AirForLife and Human Kinetics, is betting that wearable technology can lead to healthier relationships — ones that are more connected and active. “More and more people are finding out it's fun, it's powerful, and it's a whole other way to connect with people,” she says, “especially as we're facing the onslaught of new technology that is not all that terrific, people becoming more and more disconnected.” AirForLife, which was founded in 2003, has created a wearable software product called Ionic to help people connect more with people around them. Wrist and ankle-worn Ionic devices collect the body's movement data, generating feedback on activity and promoting a deeper, more personal sense of connection. “When you wear Ionic, you're wearing a little Ionic device,” Ms. Diekema says. “You're sending signals. It's only when you look into that monitor, when you look into the eyes of another human being, that you see a whole new dynamic. It's deeply personal.” Four to eight minutes of conversation among friends adds a dynamic of social engagement to an already busy day. Ms. Diekema's own experience as a “time deprived” parent reveals an all-too-common problem: We don't spend as much time with our children as we want to. “Doing everything to make sure the kids are OK is very time-consuming,” she says. “You're so busy, and there are so many things you want to do, that you start telling yourself, ‘Maybe I'll start doing it when they're not around.’” Ms. Diekema founded AirForLife with a goal of helping people spend more time in meaningful conversation, even if they are separated by miles. “In the world of Ionic, you're in the middle of the conversation. When you look into the eyes of the person you're speaking to, you're in the room with them.” Movement is a primary way in which people form those relationships. “When we're
