Amitabha Ghosh and Asok Kumar Mallik (1986), Manufacturing Science, Ellis Horwood. Duncan J L and Marcinik Z (1967), The Mechanics of Materials. Amitabha Ghosh, Ashok Kumar Mallik. Manufacturing Science 2nd edition. Published by McGraw-Hill Education, 2001. Jack, Marci Kinney. Management of Manufacturing resources. Review of manufacturing engineering. Review of manufacturing science. Packing and shipping articles and equipment for shipping. Bar and shop design. Laboratory shops. Tool and mold shops. ASM manufacturing science provides the fundamental underpinnings of technical engineering, and the procedures for designing, planning, achieving, and controlling the manufacturing process. This text is unique in that it provides both high quality and information on manufacturing processes and manufacturing engineering, with a focus on product manufacturing. Founded on the belief that the best way to understand a subject is to master its fundamental principles, the authors of Manufacturing Science have distilled a wealth of manufacturing knowledge into a simple, lucid text. The authors lead the reader through the fundamental principles of the four primary manufacturing processes, offering the first clear exposition of how manufacturing works. The language is free from jargon, and is accessible to anyone with a working knowledge of basic mechanics or geometry. And because this text is designed to be read from cover to cover, each chapter opens with a review of basic principles that helps students grasp the concepts in a more comprehensive context. 5ec8ef588b
