Roland DG Corporation is pleased to announce a brand new, ultra-compact, professional-grade, heat-resistant, portable, low-profile spectrophotometer. With the DAS-150, the company's handheld spectrophotometer, sensor, and smartphone app, are all packed together in a small package that is completely self-contained for mobile field use with minimal training. The sensor is designed for touch-based operation and USB connectivity, so it can be plugged into a computer for data retrieval in just a few minutes, either over a network or using a USB cable. Connectivity is also supported via wireless LAN, thus allowing field use in areas that have no access to the Internet. Roland DG Corporation introduces a new, ultra-compact, handheld computer controller, the DG Music series. The HG is a high-performance, portable, handheld controller which pairs with the new DG-R1 music production console. The key functions and features of the HG include: elegant and expressive touch control, handy Wi-Fi connectivity, and much more. Roland DG Corporation will be exhibiting the handheld GPS that it launched at CEDIA 2010. It comes with a record, large LCD screen. It also comes with a large variety of features and in several attractive color versions. The next generation of the popular Rogue brand of silent, modular synthesizers will take form in a new flagship series for Roland: the White Series. A hallmark of the new design philosophy are true period synths, true analog VCOs (voltage controlled oscillator) and classic step sequencers. In addition to this new design, there will be an extensive range of carefully crafted patches developed by the Roland engineering team. 5ec8ef588b
